

ANNUAL REPORT

2005

From the battlefields of Iraq to the political battles of Washington to the cultural and personal stories that fill our communities, the challenges of providing balanced, thoughtful and in-depth journalism have never been greater.

In 2005, no event more sharply defined these challenges than Hurricane Katrina – a story that spanned the terrible human drama of the storm; broad issues of urbanization, class and race that punctuated the efforts to rebuild New Orleans; and questions of government and civic accountability. Throughout the storm and its aftermath, NPR® journalists told this narrative through direct, strong and personal reporting. Since then, our commitment to chronicling this national tragedy has never wavered. NPR remains one of the few national news organizations to maintain a bureau in the Gulf region, and we have dedicated extensive resources to continue bringing the voices of local citizens to the national dialogue. The New Orleans Times-Picayune media columnist stated, “I’ve written this again and again: NPR is the go-to network for the best broadcast news coverage of our ongoing crisis.”

The year was also marked by radical changes in the sources of news and information available to the public. Many media institutions reduced their investments in journalism or consolidated their assets. NPR rose to serve the public interest with the completion of a three-year strategic news expansion that added more journalists, beats, investigative reporting and bureaus worldwide. In 2005, NPR also extended its public service mission to reach new and more diverse listeners through new media and was recognized for its leadership, along with its Member stations, in such emerging media platforms as podcasting, on-demand and digital HD Radio. Now, NPR has joined with our Member stations and our other partners in public broadcasting in a series of collaborative initiatives to strengthen local stations’ news operations and create a comprehensive approach to news coverage that spans regional, national and international reporting. Through these efforts, NPR and the public radio system will seek to fill the void in the changing media landscape and answer the public demand for relevant, thoughtful journalism.

Ultimately, our success is measured by our value to the public, our peers and our supporters. In 2005, NPR programming attracted a record 26 million listeners weekly – double our audience from only seven years ago. NPR’s work was recognized with such professional honors as the George Foster Peabody Award for our Iraq coverage, Alfred I. duPont-Columbia University Award, Sigma Delta Chi Award, InterAction Award for Reporting Excellence in Humanitarian Issues, Investigative Reporters and Editors Award, American Academy for the Advancement of Science Award and an Edward R. Murrow Award from the Radio and Television News Directors Association. These efforts and achievements were supported by contributions from countless foundations, corporations and individuals. Your faith in the value of in-depth, fact-based journalism and civil discourse, and in NPR and public radio, is recognized and valued every day.

Ken Stern

Chief Executive Officer

OUR MISSION

The mission of NPR is to work in partnership with member stations to create a more informed public — one challenged and invigorated by a deeper understanding and appreciation of events, ideas and cultures. To accomplish our mission, we produce, acquire, and distribute programming that meets the highest standards of public service in journalism and cultural expression; we represent our members in matters of their mutual interest; and we provide satellite interconnection for the entire public radio system.

NPR IS...

Since its launch in 1970, NPR has evolved into a major media organization, primary news provider and dominant force in American life.

In 2005, a record 26 million listeners weekly tuned in to NPR programs. More than 800 public radio stations, throughout all 50 states, bring NPR to their local communities; more than 99 percent of Americans live in an area served by an NPR Member station.

NPR produces and/or distributes more than 1300 hours of news, information, cultural and entertainment programming weekly. These include the flagship daily news magazines Morning Edition[®] and All Things Considered[®], which rank among the most listened to programs on U.S. radio; the midday news magazine *Day to Day*SM; News & Notes, the daily news and information program exploring African-American issues, and the news talk shows Talk of the Nation[®], Fresh Air[®] and The Diane Rehm Show. NPR's cultural and entertainment slate includes the hit humor shows Car Talk[®] and Wait Wait...Don't Tell Me![®] as well as such music programs as World Café[®], From the Top and Sacred Classics. In 2005, NPR also offered a live broadcast of the American opera Porgy & Bess and the "Higher Ground" Hurricane Katrina relief concert, in partnership with WBGO Jazz 88.3FM. Sirius[®] Satellite Radio features *NPR Now*SM and *NPR Talk*SM, two 24/7 channels offering a variety of shows from NPR and other public radio producers. A leader in the research and development of the new digital HD Radio technology, NPR distributes five 24/7 multicast music channels in jazz, folk, electronica, classical and AAA formats.

NPR News has been honored with every major journalism award for its in-depth, objective reporting, investigations, special series and features. Through a multi-year expansion, NPR News has further strengthened its resources and increased staffing, added new beats and grew its domestic and foreign bureaus. In 2005, NPR had correspondents in 36 cities worldwide; among NPR's new bureaus are Cairo, Dakar and Hanoi. This year, NPR also launched an initiative to identify and develop the next generation of outstanding public radio journalists through the year-long Kroc Fellowship Program, one of the NPR News initiatives made possible by a 2003 bequest from Joan B. Kroc, philanthropist and widow of McDonald's Corporation founder Ray A. Kroc.

NPR.org extends the organization's journalism and public service mission through hourly online newscasts, audio streaming and comprehensive NPR archives. NPR.org also offers original-to-Internet programming, including online columns, the music show *All Songs Considered*SM and live streaming concerts featuring top musical artists. In 2005, NPR and public radio stations began podcasting, creating a variety of on-demand content and a shared directory for public radio fans to find a wide range of quality titles.

NPR's reach is global: The 24/7 NPR Worldwide service offers NPR news, information, cultural and entertainment shows to listeners in more than 150 countries through satellite and digital radio, and also reaches members of the military and their families through American Forces Radio.
